

Day 4: Recruiter Behavior & The 6-Second Scan

Morning Post (Educational)

LinkedIn Post

Recruiters do not read your CV. They scan it.

Many job seekers write long, dense paragraphs in their profile summary, thinking the recruiter will read every word. They hide their best achievements in the middle of a wall of text.

The 6-second scan is a real recruiter habit. In those few seconds, they only look at: job titles, company names, dates of employment, and the top-fold summary. If your layout is cluttered or hard to read, they move to the next candidate.

Keep your profile summary under three sentences. Use bullet points instead of paragraphs for achievements. Use standard headings (like "Professional Experience" instead of "Where I've Been") so the recruiter's eye knows where to go.

I've reviewed dozens of CVs, and the ones with clean formatting and clear visual hierarchy always get parsed better by both ATS software and human recruiters.

You don't need a fancy design; you need a structured layout that highlights your value instantly. You can use AI to write summary sections that hook the recruiter.

If this sounds familiar, I'll be teaching the complete workflow inside my upcoming AI Job Seeker Workshop. Seats are limited.

Handwritten Visual

Handwritten Visual Text

"Recruiters scan. Clear layouts get read."

AI Visual Prompt

Minimalist overhead photo of clean white paper. The sentence is handwritten neatly in thick black marker. Natural lighting. No hands. No notebook. No decorations. High contrast. Mobile friendly. Lots of white space. Instagram and LinkedIn optimized.

Repurposed Formats

LinkedIn Carousel

- Slide 1: Title: The 6-Second Scan.
- Slide 2: The Mistake: Writing walls of text that bury your best achievements.
- Slide 3: The Truth: Recruiters only scan job titles, companies, dates, and the top summary.
- Slide 4: The Fix: Use bullet points, bold key metrics, and keep summaries under 3 lines.
- Slide 5: Register: AI Job Seeker Workshop. Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

WhatsApp Status

- Slide 1: Recruiters scan your CV in 6 seconds. If they can't find your value, you're out.
- Slide 2: Learn how to format your CV for maximum impact. Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

Facebook Post

Recruiters do not read your CV. They scan it.

Job seekers who write long, dense summaries usually get rejected. The 6-second scan is real. Recruiters look for titles, companies, dates, and top-fold metrics.

Keep it clean. I've reviewed dozens of CVs, and structure wins. Learn how to design a recruiter-friendly resume at the AI Job Seeker Workshop. Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

X Thread

- 1/ Recruiters do not read your CV. They scan it. Here is what they actually look at in the first 6 seconds. ■
 - 2/ Wall of text summaries get ignored. Recruiters are looking for specific anchors on your CV.
 - 3/ These anchors are: Job titles, company names, dates of employment, and the top summary.
 - 4/ If these aren't clear, the recruiter won't read the rest, no matter how qualified you are.
 - 5/ The fix: Keep summaries under 3 sentences. Bold your key metrics. Use standard section titles.
 - 6/ I've reviewed dozens of CVs, and clean, structured ones get the most callbacks.
 - 7/ Learn how to optimize your CV layout with AI. AI Job Seeker Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>
-

Afternoon Post (Story / Case Study)

LinkedIn Post

We changed the first three inches of her CV, and she got an interview.

She was highly experienced in project management, but her CV was a wall of text. Her achievements were buried under descriptions of company history.

Recruiters are busy. If they have to search for your value, they assume it does not exist. Your best achievements must be visible at a glance.

We restructured the top fold of her CV. We removed the corporate jargon and put three clear, metric-driven achievements right below her contact details.

One of my clients got hired this week after we focused on optimizing the layout and readability of her CV.

You don't need to rewrite your entire career history; you just need to position it where recruiters can see it.

If you're serious about improving your applications, I'll show the exact system during the workshop.

Handwritten Visual

Handwritten Visual Text

"Position your value where it can't be missed."

AI Visual Prompt

Minimalist overhead photo of clean white paper. The sentence is handwritten neatly in thick black marker. Natural lighting. No hands. No notebook. No decorations. High contrast. Mobile friendly. Lots of white space. Instagram and LinkedIn optimized.

Repurposed Formats

LinkedIn Carousel

- Slide 1: Title: The Power of the Top Fold.
- Slide 2: The Client: Great experience, but buried under company history.
- Slide 3: The Problem: Recruiters missed her achievements during the 6-second scan.
- Slide 4: The Solution: We moved her top 3 results to the first three inches of the CV.
- Slide 5: The Result: Callbacks started coming in. Learn the layout system in my workshop. Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

WhatsApp Status

- Slide 1: Put your best achievements at the very top of your CV, not the bottom.
- Slide 2: See the layout strategy that got my client hired. Join my workshop. Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

Facebook Post

We changed the first three inches of her CV, and she got an interview.

She had great experience, but it was buried under paragraphs. We restructured the top fold to show metric-driven achievements immediately. One of my clients got hired this week because of this simple layout change.

If you want the exact system, I'll show you how to structure your CV at the AI Job Seeker Workshop. Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

X Thread

- 1/ We changed the first three inches of her CV, and she got an interview. Here is why layout hierarchy matters. ■
- 2/ She was an experienced project manager, but her resume was a wall of text.
- 3/ Recruiters don't have time to dig through paragraphs. If they can't find your value immediately, they move on.
- 4/ We moved her top 3 metrics to the top fold, right below her contact info.

5/ One of my clients got hired this week after we optimized the visual hierarchy of her CV.

6/ You don't need a total rewrite. You need strategic positioning.

7/ Learn how to format your CV for maximum impact. Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

Evening Post (Workshop Invitation)

LinkedIn Post

You have 6 seconds to make an impression. How is your CV performing?

Most resumes fail because they are designed from the applicant's perspective, not the recruiter's perspective.

Recruiter-centric design is clean, brief, and maps directly to the job description requirements.

You can use AI to run a "6-second scan simulation" on your CV to identify structural weaknesses and fix them before applying.

I've worked with over 10 professionals to design resumes that guide the recruiter's eye straight to their value.

I'm sharing the exact prompts and templates I use to optimize CV layouts.

Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

Handwritten Visual

Handwritten Visual Text

"Design your CV for the recruiter, not yourself."

AI Visual Prompt

Minimalist overhead photo of clean white paper. The sentence is handwritten neatly in thick black marker. Natural lighting. No hands. No notebook. No decorations. High contrast. Mobile friendly. Lots of white space. Instagram and LinkedIn optimized.

Repurposed Formats

LinkedIn Carousel

- Slide 1: Title: The Recruiter-Centric CV.
- Slide 2: The Mistake: Designing a CV based on what you like, not what recruiters need.
- Slide 3: The Strategy: Clean formatting, prominent metrics, and zero filler text.
- Slide 4: The Action: Run a simulation using AI to see what stands out in 6 seconds.
- Slide 5: Join Us: AI Job Seeker Workshop. Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

WhatsApp Status

- Slide 1: Your CV should be designed for the recruiter, not yourself.
- Slide 2: Learn how to write a recruiter-centric CV with AI. Workshop registration link:
<https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

Facebook Post

You have 6 seconds to make an impression. How is your CV performing?

Most CVs fail because they are not recruiter-centric. Clean, brief, and targeted layouts win. I've worked with over 10 professionals to build resumes that guide the recruiter's eye.

Get the templates and AI prompts. The AI Job Seeker Workshop registration link: <https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>

X Thread

- 1/ You have 6 seconds to make an impression. How is your CV performing? ■
- 2/ Most resumes fail because they are written for the job seeker, not the recruiter.
- 3/ Recruiter-centric resumes are clean, direct, and show achievements in the top fold.
- 4/ You can use AI to test your CV's visual hierarchy and find what stands out.
- 5/ I've worked with over 10 professionals to help them design resumes that stand out.
- 6/ I'm sharing the templates and prompts at the AI Job Seeker Workshop. Workshop registration link:
<https://duncanmakoyo.com/#!/workshop>