

Day 12: Three Days to Go (Only 5 Seats Left)

Morning Post (Educational)

LinkedIn Post

The cost of delaying your job search is not just a missed opportunity; it is weeks of lost salary.

Many job seekers wait for the "perfect time" to fix their resume, spending months sending out low-quality applications. They don't realize that every week spent without interviews is costing them financially.

If you earn KES 50,000 a month, every month of unemployment is KES 50,000 lost. A 2-hour investment to optimize your workflow is far cheaper than spending another three months sending generic CVs.

Take 10 minutes today to audit your CV against your target role. If you cannot find clear metrics that match what the market is asking for, you are losing money by applying.

I've reviewed dozens of CVs, and the candidates who take active control of their application strategy consistently secure interviews months ahead of those who wait.

Fix your application system before you waste more time on empty applications.

If this sounds familiar, I'll be teaching the complete workflow inside my upcoming AI Job Seeker Workshop. Seats are limited.

1/ The cost of delaying your job search is not just a missed opportunity; it is weeks of lost salary. Here's why waiting is expensive. ■

2/ Job seekers often put off updating their resumes because the process is tiring.

3/ But every week you spend with zero callbacks is a week of lost income.

4/ A KES 1,500 investment in a proven system is far cheaper than months of unemployment.

5/ I've reviewed dozens of CVs, and candidates with optimized systems find roles much faster.

6/ Stop wasting time on manual, low-yield applications.

Afternoon Post (Story / Case Study)

LinkedIn Post

He delayed updating his CV for six months. He missed out on a KES 80,000 operations role.

He knew his resume was weak and didn't show his achievements, but he kept putting it off, saying he was "too busy." When his dream company suddenly posted a vacancy, he rushed a generic application. He got rejected.

Opportunity does not wait for your CV to be ready. You must build your resume before the vacancy opens, so you are ready to apply within minutes.

We helped him build a master CV and a rapid tailoring system. When another role opened two weeks later, he submitted a tailored application in 15 minutes.

One of my clients got hired this week because his resume was already optimized and aligned when the opportunity arose.

Stop waiting for the perfect vacancy to fix your resume. Prepare the system now.

If you're serious about improving your applications, I'll show the exact system during the workshop.

Evening Post (Workshop Invitation)

LinkedIn Post

We are three days away from the AI Job Seeker Workshop, and only 5 seats remain.

Many job seekers wait until the final hours to register, only to find the Google Meet capacity is full.

Regular tickets are KES 1,500. This is a live, interactive session where we will go through the exact prompt sequences and template formatting.

I've worked with over 10 professionals, helping them transition their resumes and land callbacks.

Don't spend another month guessing what recruiters want. Secure one of the final 5 seats tonight.
